Accessing application instance from self.application (Scapy) I'm using Scapy to snoop on http traffic between a client and a server. However, after receiving packets I would like to be able to associate the packets with the instances of the application that sent them. Can I access the application instance information in the send and recv methods of the Scapy class? A: According to the Scapy documentation, you need to send your header from the packet initialization method. The source for the example below: Basic example: `this.from_packet()` Advanced example: use the packets in the received list I'm unfamiliar with the `from_packet()` method, but I don't think the headers it generates are accessible via the `send/recv` methods. Example: >>>

```
from scapy.all import * >>> pkt =
IP()/TCP() >>> pkt.tcpflags = tcpflags() >>> pkt.tcpflags.syn = 1 >>> # If we want to associate the packet with the application we are sniffing from, >>> #
we need to assign it to the packets
received list >>> pkt.received = pkt.pkts
>>> pkt.sprintf("Request header -
%IP.src% - %TCP.dport% - %TCP.seq%
```

- %TCP.flags.syn%) Request header - 192.168.0.1 - 80 - 343759917 - 1 - 0 We can also use the packet itself Example:
>>> pkt.sprintf("Request header -
%IP.src% - %TCP.dport% - %TCP.seq%
- %TCP.flags.syn%) Request header - 192.168.0.1 - 80 - 343759917 - 1 - 0 If the packet itself is sufficient to
